Forecast For Southwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Friday 12 Feb 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Cloudy and dry today. Turning more unsettled on the weekend.

Today:
Any early wintry showers in the far southwest will soon die out to leave a dry but, largely cloudy day with some brighter spells in the afternoon. Staying windy, with the risk of coastal gales and less cold. Maximum temperature 5 deg C (41 deg F).

Tonight:
Remaining cloudy in the west this evening, with clearer skies further east. Staying dry overnight before cloud thickens from the west and winds strengthen. Another cold night. Minimum temperature -4 deg C (25 deg F).

Saturday:
A cloudy day with outbreaks of rain, sleet, and snow, moving eastwards across the region and easing through the day. A risk of freezing rain. Windy and less cold. Maximum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Outbreaks of heavy rain from the west on Sunday. Cloudy but largely dry on Monday. Further wet weather on Tuesday. Milder but windy throughout.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.